- New York Times front page story: Gender Games; College Teams, Relying on Deception, Undermine Gender Equity; "The fraud is disheartening. Intercollegiate athletics are rare educational opportunities, subsidized with our tax dollars, which deliver superior lifelong returns on investment. When an athletic department engineers itself to produce only the appearance of fairness, they flout the law and cheat women."
- New York Times front page story: Born on Sideline, Cheering Clamors to Be Sport, "As long as it's actually operating as a sport, we welcome [the new sport of cheerleading] into the women's sports tent," said Nancy Hogshead-Makar, the senior director of advocacy at the Women's Sports Foundation. Like gymnastics or figure skating, she said, "this is another aesthetic sport that if done right could provide lots more girls with legitimate sports experiences."
