Commissioner Jay Poerner
Lone Star Conference
1221 W. Campbell Rd
Suite 171
Richardson, TX 75080

Dear Commissioner Poerner,

We are a consortium of advocates for women and girls in sports. Access to and participation in sports improves the lives of all students, and that is particularly true for girls and women.

During this time of COVID-19, we are writing to remind you of your institutional obligation to uphold Title IX.¹ We understand that these are trying times for collegiate institutions, including athletics departments. In response to financial pressures, we have become aware that some universities are considering program cuts to their athletic programs.² As the commissioner of the Lone Star Conference, we ask that you be a leader in ensuring your conference and your members do not cut any athletic programs, and specifically, that they preserve women's athletic opportunities to participate and receive equal treatment. The data we have compiled from the Equity in Athletics Database demonstrates that women are facing serious Title IX deficiencies; they lag behind men's programming in every measurable criteria.³ The attached legal memo provides a thorough analysis of the data for your conference's members under Title IX.

As the Commissioner of the Lone Star Conference, we ask for your leadership in upholding your legal and moral obligations to women in higher education by ensuring measures are taken to protect their educational opportunities. Indeed, we sincerely hope the Lone Star Conference will be a leader in gender equality in athletics, in service of the larger goals of higher education.

In 1972, Congress passed Title IX, and President Nixon signed it into law. In 1975, schools were given three years, until 1978, to comply with the regulations applying the statute to athletics.⁴ In the 2018–2019 year alone, at Lone Star Conference member schools, in sum (refer also to table below):

- 2,268 females were denied a sports opportunity, under the first test of Title IX compliance, based on unduplicated numbers.
- There are two other legal tests for whether an institution is providing enough athletic opportunities for women, and Lone Star Conference member institutions fail both of them as well.
- If Lone Star Conference member institutions were to provide women with equal opportunities to participate and add these 2,268 female student-athletes for the 2020–2021 school year, an additional $8,702,488 in scholarship aid would need to be provided for their female student-athletes in order to equal the male student-athlete scholarships.⁵
- Moreover, Lone Star Conference member institutions would need to spend an additional $730,934 recruiting female athletes to provide this type of benefit equally to male and female athletes, as required by Title IX.
- Title IX requires not just equal opportunities quantitatively, but qualitatively as well. We urge you to review whether women's sports receive equal treatment in aspects such as: facilities, equipment, scheduling, marketing, coaching, recruiting, academic and other support.
- As a reminder, these are rare and rationed educational experiences for both men and women. Lone Star Conference member institutions provided just 7.4% of its students with a varsity sports experience in 2018–2019 school year.
- When aggregated nationally, the discrimination we have demonstrated by the Lone Star Conference adds up to tragically large losses for women, losses that will never be remedied.

⁴ 34 C.F.R. § 106, available at: <https://www2.ed.gov/policy/rights/reg/ocr/edlite-34cfr106.html#S41>.

⁵ Letter from Dr. Mary Frances O'Shea, National Coordinator for Title IX Athletics, Office for Civil Rights, Department of Education, to Nancy S. Footer, General Counsel, Bowling Green State Univ. (July 23, 1998), available at: <https://www2.ed.gov/about/offices/list/ocr/docs/bowlgrm.html>

- Last year alone, NCAA schools provided women with 63,149 fewer sports opportunities than these schools provided men, as a raw number. However, women enroll in postsecondary education at higher rates than men, so simply subtracting the opportunities provided to women from the opportunities provided to men does not capture the true discrimination gap.
- Last year alone, NCAA colleges and universities provided women with 148,030 fewer sports opportunities than provided to men, if women and men had equal opportunities. In other words, if they both had an almost 4:100 chance of getting to play collegiate sports, women would have had an additional 148,030 sports opportunities. (Men currently enjoy a 3.93% sports participation rate, while women are provided with just a 2.36% participation rate.)
- Last year alone, women lost $1 billion dollars in collegiate athletic scholarship aid, because they are women.

As you will see on the table below, we have assigned a pass/fail “grade” to indicate whether each school is providing equal participation opportunities, scholarship dollars, and benefits (using recruiting spending as one proxy) to its male and female students. Title IX compliance requires equality overall.

Denying women equal athletic opportunities is a significant loss. The research linking sports participation with life-long educational, economic, and health benefits is well-established. Sports provide males and females from diverse socioeconomic, racial, and ethnic backgrounds measurable positive educational impacts.⁶ Betsey Stevenson, an economist now at the University of Michigan, found that playing sports actually caused more education and higher incomes.⁷ Girls who play sports make 8% higher wages compared to their non-sport playing counterparts.⁸ In addition, a sports experience changes a woman’s short-term and long-term health trajectory including: decreased risk of heart disease, breast cancer, osteoporosis, tobacco and drug use, unwanted teen pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, depression and suicide.⁹ Research by Ernst and Young found that 96% of C-suite women were athletes.¹⁰

Athletics is commonly referred to as the “front porch” to the university and thereby communicates an institution’s values to the entire community. As such, athletics can lead the way toward a better environment for women on campus overall, including sexual assault prevention. Gender equality in athletics—one of the only sex-segregated areas of your member schools—demonstrates substantively that Lone Star Conference members treat men and women as equals. If the Lone Star Conference and its member institutions’ athletics departments do not treat women as equal to men, it cannot expect its male students to do so, either now or in the future.

The facts and the law are clear.

The Lone Star Conference professes to be committed to equity and inclusion. In fact, the Conference signed on to the NCAA’s Presidential Pledge to promote diversity and gender equality in intercollegiate athletics within the past four years.¹¹ Most of your peer NCAA institutions have also signed this pledge.

¹¹ NCAA’s Presidential Pledge. Available at: <http://www.ncaa.org/about/resources/inclusion/ncaa-presidential-pledge>. “The Pledge and Commitment to Promoting Diversity and Gender Equity in Intercollegiate Athletics” reads in full:

“Consistent with our mission and values, our institution, a member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, pledges to specifically commit to establishing initiatives for achieving ethnic and racial diversity, gender equity and inclusion, with a focus and emphasis on hiring practices in intercollegiate athletics, to reflect the diversity of our membership and our nation.

“We recognize and value the experiences individuals from diverse backgrounds bring to intercollegiate athletics. To that end, we will strive to identify, recruit and interview individuals from diverse backgrounds in an effort to increase their representation and retention as commissioners, athletics directors, coaches and other leaders in athletics. As part of this commitment, we will also engage in a regular diversity, inclusion and equity review to inform campus policy and diversity initiatives.

“We understand this to be a collective responsibility we owe to student-athletes, staff, our athletics programs and the entire campus community.”

Now is the time to act and live up to this pledge. The COVID-19 crisis is causing serious disruption, as are other important considerations like the Black Lives Matter movement, demands to hire women and people of color, name/image/likeness rights to athletes, concussion monitoring, and gambling oversight, among others. Gender equity and compliance with Title IX must finally be part of these major revisions to college sport.

Your member schools are failing women by hundreds of participation opportunities and millions of dollars in athletic scholarships for women. As the legal memo shows, neither the NCAA's Certification program, nor its "Institutional Performance Program" (IPP), nor its Emerging Sports Program have been effective at closing the enormous gaps for women athletes or creating diversity for employment opportunities in university athletic departments.

Data for the entire NCAA, NAIA, NJCAA, and USCAA paints a clear picture that intentional discrimination against women is not isolated to specific conferences, competitive levels, or geographic regions. Women cannot move to another competitive tier or region to escape the discrimination. Rather, intercollegiate athletics as a whole is complicit in systematic, intentional discrimination against women. These disparities reflect thousands of separate decisions over decades to provide women less. It will not end without hundreds, if not thousands of intentional decisions to rectify the injustice of sex discrimination in intercollegiate sports.

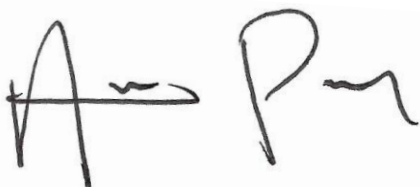

Sending out this letter, our accompanying legal memo, and our charts is part of our broader campaign to raise awareness of intentional discrimination against women in sport across the country. As we move forward with this broader campaign, we look forward to sharing the names of the conferences and schools that are taking immediate concrete steps towards their professed values of gender equality and inclusion. We are asking you to lay out the specific steps that your conference will take to end this discrimination against women, now.

We look forward to your leadership response before July 17, 2020, just weeks after the 48th anniversary of Title IX. Please respond to this correspondence by email.
